

ABSTRACT

An apparatus and process for the transport and isolation of particulate products to and from high pressure, for example supercritical, environments is described.